The China Mail.

HONGKONG, WEDNESDAY, MAY 17, 1899.

The Colony is rapidly expanding, and so far as we can judge the 'recognition' of the frontier has become an Imperial matter.

The Colony has not been consulted in the new movement. It was consulted probably a little when it came to the preparation of the Convention on which Sir Claude Macdonald induced the Chinese Government to sign; but the first idea of expansion originated with Hongkong residents and the expansion was strenuously advocated by the Hongkong Branch of the Navy League.

So that the Colony was originally responsible for the movement of territorial aggression. Since the Imperial Government has made the extension of Hongkong an Imperial question, however, we may assume that the Imperial Government is prepared to spend Imperial funds in the development of the Hinterland. Until recently, we have reason to believe that the Government contemplated a heavy increase in the local taxation to enable the Government to carry out public works in the new territory.

In other words, the burden of developing the Hinterland was to be laid upon the shoulders of the present ratepayers. The subject has occasioned some talk locally during the past month, and we observe that the Hongkong correspondent of the N.Y. Daily News has been writing as follows on the subject:—

(Coming events cast their shadows before, and I see, in outline, a prospect of increased taxation. The much-needed public works (for which there are no funds available) in the hinterland, which must be opened up by roads and railways, and the sanitation of Victoria, which will remain to be completed, all require money for their proper provision. I am not prepared to say. All I know is that the Government are considering from what sources it can be most readily and most justly drawn. Probably an increase in the local tax (otherwise the Imperial rate will all be paid) or a resort to the bid of new light dues, which some persons think would not be inequitable or even burdensome to the shipowners. Any tax, however, that in the remotest sense threatens to infringe the freedom of the port will, I am confident, meet with vigorous opposition by the Chamber of Commerce, with the consent of the community. I would suggest, for what it is worth, a tax on alcohol (it is a luxury which is sadly abused, a tax on wheeled vehicles of all kinds (which wear out the roads and cause a large outlay yearly), and the establishment of compulsory registration of servants, with payment of fees by employer and employed. It is much to be regretted that we have Penny Postage thrust upon us. While perpetually benefiting one class here, it entails a loss of some $30,000 in revenue yearly.

The Government, we understand, has referred its proposals to the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce for consideration, with a request that any suggestion for increasing the public revenue will be thankfully received. Of what the Government proposals are in detail, we are, of course, quite ignorant at the present time. Our northern contemporary, however, believes one of the proposals was to impose harbour dues on shipping frequenting the port. Such a proposal, of course, rankles. The freedom of the port of Hongkong is one of the most sacred things about the place, and we are sure that any proposal to lay a share of this Imperial burden upon the shipping will immediately raise a storm of disapprobation from the great and all-important shipping interests. As a result, the house tax will be no less unpopular, the more so as the burden falls entirely on the tenants and occupants of local house property. We do not know if the Government has fully considered the subject, but without attempting to discuss it at all deeply we would suggest the advisability of devising a tax which will be less burdensome to that increasing class, the low-salaried white man. If a tax could be initiated that would lay a fair share upon the abjectly landless, we are sure it would meet popular approval in the Colony. We do not believe that a sort of income tax upon Company dividends could be a popular, and other methods may suggest themselves to other people as likely the burden of taxation will not be made heavier on the very class it should be the object of the Government to encourage to settle in the Colony. Everybody knows that house rents are altogether out of proportion to local incomes. In this respect, Hongkong is suffering in common with Shanghai, Singapore and Odessa—and any increase of the house tax will simply add to house rents as the landlords have already, in the belief that the tax would be transferred to the tenants, raised the rents. The great shipping houses, however, are not likely to be affected by a tax on dividends. The great shipping houses, however, are not likely to be affected by a tax on dividends.

Let us suppose, for instance, that the Government proposed to increase the public revenue by a tax on dividends. The great shipping houses, however, are not likely to be affected by a tax on dividends.
